

EPHA is currently recruiting a Secretary General

Are you interested in a high profile and challenging position in one of Europe's leading health non-governmental organisations? EPHA is currently recruiting a Secretary General to replace Monika Kosińska who is leaving after six years to join the World Health Organisation.

If you are a leader in your field, with knowledge of public health and the EU environment then we are interested in hearing from you. This is an exceptional opportunity for an exceptional individual. You will be able to provide leadership for the European health community, driving forward new thinking and cutting edge approaches to health policy and health governance in a highly political environment. We are a diverse and large community of leading organisations and you must be fluent in English, experienced in bringing together people to work together for success, and able to perform with confidence and conviction in the media and high pressure public fora.

If this sounds like an opportunity for you, please email us at secretarygeneral@epha.org with a short description of why you are interested, your CV and a covering letter which should include why you are right for us and your vision for leading EPHA and public health in Europe, as well as your salary expectations. Only applications that include all these elements will be considered. If successful you will be asked for interview which will include a written test, screen test and panel interview.

EPHA offers a competitive salary, benefits including home office and representation allowance, hospitalisation insurance, flexible working including working from home and a public health and family friendly work policy.
